What is Bubble Tea? (needs edited for Ming's)

Bubble tea (also known as pearl milk tea, boba juice, boba milk tea or simply boba) is a Taiwanese tea-based drink invented in Taichung, Taiwan in the 1980s.

There are many variations of bubble tea with a wide range of ingredients. Most recipes contain a base of tea which is mixed or shaken with fruit or milk. Ice-blended versions of the tea are usually mixed with fruit or syrup, resulting in a slushy consistency. Chewy tapioca balls - also known as bubbles/pearls/boba - are often added, hence the name: bubble tea. While there are many other toppings, like Nata jelly, pudding, herbal jelly, the bubbles remain the crowd favorite. In the early '90s, bubble tea was pervasive in Japan and Hong Kong. From there, international traders pushed the product into Chinatowns all over North America where it flourished. By 2000, a veritable boom was underway with bubble operations opening across the world, Ming's Bubble Tea included!

Bubble tea has evolved since its creation and, though we try to uphold the tradition, we are fearless in the face of change. We are here to innovate and push the boundaries of bubble tea in every cup! Hurry up and find your customized drink here!

Topping Details

pudding: Our pudding topping is made with whole milk and sugar and has a smooth and jelly like texture. The flavor is sweet and milky.

Tapioca Pearls: Tapioca, also known as “bubbles” or “boba,” is a fan favorite. It is made from tapioca starch boiled in water. Tapioca has a chewy and squishy texture, and is for the most part, tasteless.

Red Bean: Red bean, also known as adzuki bean, is a topping made from dried red beans and sugar. The flavor can be described as sweet, creamy and earthy. It has a slight granulated texture and is high in fiber.

Popping Bubbles: Unlike our tapioca based chewy bubbles, our popping bubbles burst juice in your mouth for a sweet splash of flavor. Popping bubble has a thin, gel-like skin with fresh juice inside that bursts when squeezed.

Aloe Vera: An assorted aloe flavored jelly cubes that can be added to any drink to boost the flavor of your tea. Aloe Jelly contains rich natural nutrients and fiber which is beneficial for you internal body.

Lychee: Lychee is a small fruit commonly found in Asia. This jelly is made from the inside layer of a coconut, with a texture is slightly thicker than gelatin, and sweet flavor.
